Take Your Program Impacts to New Heights

Presenter: Dr. Claudette L. Smith

We know for sure that participants leave Extension training programs with a lot of information in hand. We don't know if they can do anything with it. Can they implement the solutions provided so their family can benefit? Unless participants can use the information, the impact or the benefits we hope our participants will realize will not occur. In this accountability-focused environment, we must work to ensure that program impact happens. In this session, you will learn how to use the performance-based instruction philosophy to take your program impacts to new heights.

Learning Objectives:

At the end of this training, participants will be able to:

- Write performance objectives that guide program content to enhance program impact.
- Develop training that results in skill development versus information sharing.
- Assess skill mastery by participants.

Get Connected to Local Foods offsite

Presenter: Annie Baggett

Local food and where it comes from has never been more important to consumers. Agritourism is an opportunity for farms to educate consumers as they expand and diversify their revenue streams/operations by welcoming the public. With the goal to educate the consumer and connect them directly to the farmers that are growing produce and raising protein, Agritourism activities on farms are happening right now and an opportunity to bridge the learning gap in your state. In this session, Family Consumer Science (FCS) Extension Agents will gain knowledge on how your community can benefit from lessons learned in North Carolina. From asset mapping to understanding how communities are using real time technology to keep consumers connected to agriculture to learning what's in season, tap farm experiences and accessing local food how, where and when it can be purchased, you'll leave with action steps designed to generate positive results.

Learning Objectives

Using this white paper as a guide, explore what may motivate families to eat more local food. Are families that are engaged in local food experiences, like picking fruit, for example, more inclined to eat healthier local food options? Are those in your community merely interested because local food simply tastes better or enhances the relationships with local growers and producers? Does the consumer consider food as medicine?

Given the answers to these questions in your community –

- 1) Participants will learn to identify up to 50 local food assets in their community (farms, fisheries, pick-your-own operations, farmers markets, etc.) that are equipped to educate families about the value of local food.
- 2) Identify and team with other Cooperative Extension agents in your community and neighboring ones, with local food councils and other local food advocates to identify and map local food resources with the goal of connecting residents to growers and producers within ____ miles of residents to enhance access to local food.

Foundations of Flavor offsite

Part 1: Savoring Spices

Presenters: Mark Weathington MS

Most people rarely think much if at all about the exotic locales and amazing tales held in each of the jars filling their spice cabinets. Whether cardamom or cloves, each has a unique story. Join us for “Savoring Spices” as we expand our knowledge of the plants that enrich and enhance the flavors of our favorite foods.

Learning Objectives

Part 2: Savoring Spices

Presenters: Catherine Hill, MS, RDN, LDN

Flavor and taste are often used interchangeably, but in fact these are two very different experiences. You may be more familiar with the five distinct tastes: sweet, bitter, sour, salty, and umami. Taste is only part of the entire experience we call flavor. By understanding flavor, and your own flavor preferences, you can create more delicious foods that you, your family and the clientele will enjoy. Participants will receive a box lunch with samples of the demonstrated recipes.

Learning Objectives

- 1. Identify the 4 Foundations of Flavor and how they can alter the way we experience taste
- 2. Develop skills to assess your own individual flavor preference
- 3. Observe a cooking demonstration where the 4 Foundations of Flavors are utilized

Opening General Session

How To Thrive As An Extension Agent

Presenter: Jones Loflin

How often do you feel overwhelmed by all that's expected of you... and that you expect of yourself? There's always a new program to create, a community member who wants too much of your time, or a volunteer to be trained. You spend your days trying to keep up, wishing there were more time to plan, build deeper connections with others, and maybe even carve out a little more time for your personal wellness.

In our opening keynote address, Jones Loflin will offer a five-step strategy you can use to move from surviving to thriving each day. You'll learn how to create the boundaries that protect your schedule and identify the essential routines you need to have in place each day. Most importantly, you'll discover fresh ways to work with others that improve their ability to help you get the right work done!

Learning Objectives:

- Identify three sources of professional and/or personal overload
- Determine one new routine to add to their workday to increase their efficiency or effectiveness
- Create three healthy boundaries they can use to protect time on their calendar
